

Commitment Letter of SAR Network Security conducts Red Lines

I, Adetunji Adetunji, deeply recognize and understand that the red lines of Cyber Security conducts specified by Huawei are practices that may affect cyber security and prohibited by the laws and regulations of most countries. If I breach the regulations, I will assume the legal liabilities even criminal charges. I hereby commit that I will strictly follow Huawei's cyber security management regulations and assume the corresponding legal liabilities according to the appropriate laws and regulations if I conduct any of the following red lines of cyber security conducts. Also, I will be responsible for the losses brought to the company caused by these violations. Red lines of Cyber security conduct are as follows:

1. Access customer's system and collect, process, or modify the data and information on customer network without documented permission.
2. Connect personal portable device or storage media to customer network without documented permission.
3. Operations beyond the scope approved by customer.
4. Operations by using other people's account or unauthorized account to log in to customer's devices.
5. Implant malicious codes, malicious software, backdoors, reserve concealed interfaces or accounts in products or services.
6. Attack and undermine customer's networks. Crack customer's account password.
7. Disclose and spread the data and information on customer's network.
8. Use shared accounts and passwords without customer's documented permission.
9. Retain or use the administrator account and unauthorized accounts after the commercial use of network or the maintenance transition.
10. Run the unauthorized software in writing by Huawei or Huawei client on a customer network, or use software versions, patches, or licenses that are not obtained through official channels.
11. Use information and data in customer's system to seek improper gains or for illegal purposes.
